Mexico City

Mexico City, the City of Palaces, the ancient capital of the Mexican empire and the jewel in New Spanish Viceroy's crown, is today one of the biggest, most complex and most beautiful cities in the world. The mere size of the urban spread makes it a city among cities.

Mexico City is a modern, cosmopolitan city situated in an old lake basin that is surrounded by volcanic mountains. The different cultures that inhabited the city during the course of the centuries left an interesting architectural legacy that comprises many different styles. Firstly, there are the pre-hispanic remains that tell of the greatness of the civilizations that settled on this land before the arrival of the Spaniards. Mexican art can be seen through the ruins of the Templo Mayor (The Great Temple), the site where the monolith of the goddess Coyolxauqui was found.

Cuba

In this country that is frozen in time, colourful cars from the 1940s, 50s and 60s decorate the city streets that are lined with an exciting eclectic mix of architecture from the last 500 years. The perfect photo is around every corner, regardless of whether you are a professional photographer or a frantic selfie taker.

The friendliness and openness of its people is renowned the world over and every street corner bar is alive with Cuban music and dance.

Culturally, Cuba is considered part of Latin America. It is a multiethnic country whose people, culture and customs derive from diverse origins. The original aboriginal Taíno and Ciboney peoples from the 4th Millenium BC, the long period of Spanish colonialism, the introduction of African slaves, the occupation by the United States from 1902 and the close relationship with the Soviet Union during the Cold War.

Mexico City D

The architects that arrived from Europe during the colonial period applied and shared their knowledge of baroque, neoclassic and other styles of art that were combined with the indigenous styles to create an architecture that is quite unique. Works such as the Metropolitan Cathedral, palaces, mansions and an endless number of sober, sumptuous churches adorn the central area of the city now called the Historic Centre; these extraordinary types of buildings can also be seen in some of the picturesque towns and villages such as Coyoacán, San Ángel, Tlalpan and Xochimilco that used to be the outskirts of the city but have now become incorporated into the built up areas; in spite of this, they still maintain their provincial atmosphere. Later, after Mexico became an independent country, new districts of the city were built in a Frenchified style and in the art deco and colonial Californian styles.

Modernism was characterized by magnificent skyscrapers that sprung up in districts such as Polanco, Anzures, Del Valle and Santa Fe. The advantage of a mega-city such as Mexico City is that it offers the visitor all sorts of entertainment possibilities during the day and at night. Avenues like Avenida Insurgentes are a true axis of fun and recreation and have spots that cater to all tastes. Mexican culture in all its manifestations can be admired at the large number of quality museums that can be found in many different parts of the city. These have displays and exhibitions of art and culture ranging from the pre Hispanic (the National Museum of Anthropology) to the Vice Regal (the Franz Mayer Museum) to the modern (the Museum of Modern Art), as well as Mexican traditions such as those in the Frida Kahlo Museum.

Trinidad is located 106 kilometers south of Santa Clara and about 90 km from Cienfuegos, and is a relic of the early days of the Spanish colony. The city was founded in 1514 and the explorer Diego Velaguez used it as a base for expeditions into the "New World". Cortes set out from here for Mexico in 1518, but despite this early start it remained a haven for smugglers until the late 18th century. Smugglers brought slaves and gold from British Jamaica, but all this changed in the early 19th century when a slave revolt in Haiti caused French planters to flee to Trinidad.

"Plaza Mayor" is the center of the town. The cathedral "Iglesia" Parroquial de la Santisima Trinidad", built between 1817 and 1892, is the largest church in Cuba. The "Museo Romantico" located on Calle Hernandez 52, next to the church, has an excellent exhibition of romantic-style porcelain, glass, paintings and ornate furniture, belonging to the Conde de Brunet family, dating from 1830 to 1860.

The museum "Municipal de Historia" is on street Simon Bolivar 423, an attractive building with some displays, but it offers a good view of Trinidad from the tower.

We will board a Trajinera (a kind of boat) that take us for a ride through the channels of "Xochimilco Gardens". ### ABOUT XOCHIMILCO:

The zone of Xochimilco, 28 km to the south, is the only remaining reminder of the Lacustrine landscape of the Aztec capital, where the conquistadores destroyed the monuments and drained the canals. On the edge of the residual lake of Xochimilco (the southern arm of the great dried-up lake of Texcoco where the Aztecs had settled on a group of islets linked to solid ground by footbridges), and in the midst of a network of small canals, are still some Chinampas, the floating gardens that the Spanish so admired. This half-natural, half-artificial landscape is now an 'ecological reserve'.
